Kudos for Cryptagon

Central Intelligence Agency personnel are doing a better job abroad than their Russian counterparts in the KGB despite being outnumbered cloak and dagger by the KGB two-to-one, according to Sen. Milton Young (R-N.D.).

The Senator has just returned from a globe-girdling tour of CIA crypts in key cities abroad and says he was impressed by "intelligent, personable and experienced" CIA officials who briefed him. He made the trip as a member of the special Senate subcommittee examining the CIA's multi-million-dollar secret budget in detail.
